THE EARTHQUAKE FAX: What Happened?

By Art Bell

Editor's note: Art Bell's February 10, 1995 show featured internationally-known futurist Gordon-Michael Scallion predicting a devastating series of earthquakes to occur in the United States during 1995. One of them is a 9.0 earthquake in Palm Springs, California. Shortly after Scallion's February appearance, Art Bell received one of the most unusual and troubling faxes imaginable. Here's the story in Art's own words:

he accompanying two-page document, which appears to constitute a U.S. Geological Survey report predicting a 9.2 magnitude earthquake in Palm Springs, California on April 18, 1995, was faxed to me, initially anonymously, in March. Of course I had no way of knowing what kind of document I had on my hands, except that it was calling for an earthquake that would have destroyed Los Angeles and killed perhaps millions of people.

My quest began. Although I thought the mathematics looked professional and logical, I am not a geologist. So I had a geologist in Washington state examine the document, and he informed me that the math was correct, given the magnitude of earthquake predicted. That frightened me a little bit.

My next move was to call the U.S.G.S. in Menlo Park, California, where I spoke to a public relations person who took it directly into the Earthquake Director's office—the big guy. The Director's initial reaction was, "We get these all the time." But the public relations person's reaction was, "My God, but not printed with our stationery and our name. What is this? It looks serious to me." The Director then completely changed his tone and sent copies of it to Reston, Virginia which is their main office. My contact at U.S.G.S. got back to me and said, "All I can tell you is, we've got no answer, and I consider my boss's reaction to be weird."

At that point, I actually talked to the person who sent the fax. That further freaked me out, because if one is intent on perpetrating a hoax, one rarely identifies oneself. He assured me it was good data. I asked him to get me a second source. He never did.

So, I never went on the air with it until after the date of the projected earthquake had passed. To do so would have been irresponsible without second sources, but it was an agonizing time for me. In addition to the weight of having to decide whether or not to air such dire "information," I was also in the major impact zone if it had occurred. Believe me, it was scary.

Best radio interview

Art, just a note to say that you did a great job with that interview Saturday morning. Since 1980, when I came out with that book on Love Canal and toxic wastes, I've done tons of these shows. I've done four national publicity tours for my books, I was on the college lecture circuit for 10 years (with interviews at more than 100 colleges), and all kinds of phoner shows. I've probably done at least 200 to 300 TV and radio shows in the past 15 years, including "Nightline," "Today" and "Donahue."

Your interview was among the very best. It was the best radio interview in memory. Keep up the great work.

Inside Waco

As someone who lost grandchildren at Mt. Carmel, I would like to correct some misinformation:

THE WOUNDED: Before the firing started, David Koresh went out the front door, unarmed, hands up, trying to tell the approaching agents that there were women and children inside. Face it, either the agents just didn't care or they didn't believe David. Lynch admitted on the 911 tape that they knew about the children.

Anyway, David was shot in the stomach; he also took a hit in the wrist and was knocked to the ground. Perry Jones, 60, standing behind him, caught bullets in the stomach. Peter Gent, 24, was in the water tower when he was shot in the head. Mr. Hipsman was on the lower floor in the Northern section of the men's quarters, when he was also shot in the head while sitting on his bed eating his breakfast. (Because of the angle of the bullet that came through the plastic water tank outside his back wall, he had to have been shot by the helicopter crew.)

Jadine Wendell had just finished nursing her baby and had just handed it to someone when the bullets started flying and struck her as she lay in her bed. One other man was also shot dead inside the house, but I don't remember his name. Steve Snider's wife, as she was sitting, was struck in the hand. The bullet exited her hand, entered her arm, traveled up her arm and out her shoulder. Mike Shroeder, along with two others, tried to make their way home to their families. Mike never made it onto the property. He was shot in the back several times. At the time these people were murdered they were all unarmed.

As for the agents: If what the BATF and FBI said is true ("All the fatalities and wounded occurred within the first two minutes"), then none of this blood was on the hands of the people of Mt. Carmel. You see, they couldn't even get to their guns for the first 15 minutes or so. Then they had trouble trying to assemble the right ammo, clip and whatever to the right gun. Paul Fatta had taken the majority of the firearms to a gun show in Austin. The agents knew there would not be many weapons there; that's why they came in like Rambos. But they didn't expect the bullets from the helicopters to come through the building as easily as they did, killing and wounding the residents also.

THE AGENTS: Many of the agents out there (BATF) realized only too late that what they were caught up in was wrong. Any of them who tried to speak up were told to shut up or else. Some have quit their jobs, some are getting counseling, and some are just plain scared of their own government. Several have come forward. Eventually, people like "Doc" who can't see beyond their noses, will be given one last chance to wake up before it's too late. The Truth of what took place at Mt. Carmel will be revealed.

May God continue to bestow blessings upon you and those that choose to see and hear truth where only lies are given. Look to God for protection of your souls and it will be given. Keep God's laws above all else and you will have the promise of Eternal Life. Sign me:

For Today

I thought you'd like my poem for the newsletter:

For today we have a roof over our heads. For today we are eating. For today there is no war at our front door. For today the system struggles on. For tonight my wife sleeps at my side. And whoever or whatever is responsible for any of this, ancestors, parents, history, church, school, friends, me and you, or God and Christ, Thank you For today.

THE OKLAHOMA BOMBING & THE POLITICS OF ENVY

By Art Bell

ast month I began "Part 1" of this column with a fax one of you sent me. It stated a genuine fear that America's growing national rage over our political differences might be heading us to civil war. Who would have thought that within days of sending that article out to you, America would be hit with the tragedy of Oklahoma City?

Suddenly we saw unforgettable images of a nine-story building torn open from top to bottom, people sitting curbside holding bloody bandages to their faces, and ultimately the horrid pictures of dead babies being carried from the Beirut-like wreckage of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. And suddenly Americans didn't have to look further to imagine what our collective future might be: anger, hatred, terrorism, and yes, perhaps even civil war.

When it comes to the tone of public debate, it is up to us now. We can take our foot off the pedal, and slow down and turn around, or we can keep on the way we are going—over a cliff. America is at a significant cultural/political crossroads. We must decide just how much we love freedom, and just how much we are willing to sacrifice for it. Of course, first we've got to understand freedom, and understand ourselves as well. That's where I think our real problem lies.

All you have to do is listen to some of the callers on my show to know that there are lots of Americans who don't understand their own country, or themselves for that matter. They want to let government be the final arbiter of human affairs. And they figure the bigger that government is, the better it can handle all the problems. Wait until you find out what they consider problems.

I started a show one night talking about a particular "welfare attitude" which seems to say: "Give me what I want, or else!" There's a dangerous "you owe me" spirit behind that attitude, one that is increasingly affecting American politics. You can also see that same attitude among criminals, the "have-nots" taking from the "haves" and feeling righteous about it. I made those basic points on the air and that's all it took to raise a familiar voice: "Hello, Mr. Bell. It's the socialist from Kansas City." It was a fast slide from there. "Your whole society is the 'haves' taking from the 'have-nots'."

"Mr. Bell, these people don't have any hope, you know. You've got institutionalized poverty in this country. These people know they're never going to get the nice car and the nice home. Don't you think they're going to turn to the easiest way?"

How could I have missed that obvious philosophical point—if you can't earn it, steal it—or demand it from the "leaner not meaner" government.

There's an ignorant, characterless fury out there among an increasing number of Americans. They need somehow to blame their personal problems on someone else, and the "haves" are an easy target (including, by the way, the "haves" in government). Their "logic" is simple: I'm poor because you're rich—The money you earn comes directly out of my pocket (by way of "tax cuts for the rich," etc.).

Does that sound far fetched? It isn't. And it doesn't help that our politicians and the media often act like cheerleaders. I told "the socialist from K.C." that if this attitude keeps up, we'll end up a third world country. "You're right," he said. "Because you greedy people gotta have it all! These people making $150,000 and $200,000—it's stupid! When you've got all these problems that need addressing, it's just plain stupid."

Well, I guess that settles that. It's time to set up the Federal Department of Fair Wages and Reasonable Profit.

"The socialist" has absolutely no concept of what produces wealth in this country. I suspect he's envious of it. He thinks that people who make that kind of money are essentially evil. And he is not alone in that thinking. Ironically, the overall national prosperity that he takes for granted is threatened because of people exactly like him.

No matter what their political claims, the extreme left and the extreme right have a common thread; their anger involves envy. These people are struggling in their own lives for many different reasons and when they see others doing well, whether they call them the rich, the corporate elite, fat-cat government bureaucrats, or just plain yuppies—it bothers them. But the bottom line is envy: "Why can't I have what they have?" The excuse to act may be Waco or Rodney King, but the anger that fuels the action is rooted in the feeling of being left out.

Everyone seems to have placed Oklahoma terrorist Timothy McVeigh on the conservative side of the political spectrum. You've heard it: Right wing extremist—the radical right—right wing militias, etc. But they may be missing the real story here. McVeigh doesn't sound like a "conservative" of any real color to me. His views are envy-based, and basically a form of socialist thinking, whether he knows it or not. The irony is that I think he knows it. Listen to this letter he wrote to a local newspaper just three years ago:

"Who's to blame for [America's social/political] mess? At a point when the world has seen Communism fall as an imperfect system to manage people, Democracy seems to be headed down the same road. No one is seeing 'the big picture.' Maybe we have to combine ideologies to achieve the perfect utopian government. Remember government sponsored healthcare was a Communist idea? Should only the rich be allowed to live long? Does that say that because a person is poor he is a lesser human being and doesn't deserve to live as long because, well, he doesn't wear a tie to work? What is it going to take to open the eyes of our elected officials?"

THE OKLAHOMA LESSON

By David Kupelian

ur one duty to the victims and to their families," President Clinton solemnly intoned during the period of national shock and mourning that followed the Oklahoma City bombing, "is to purge ourselves of the dark forces which gave rise to this evil."

While the President was probably thinking of militia and other "radical" groups as these "dark forces," let's take a closer look.

Since the April 19 tragedy, the major media have bombarded Americans with exposés of "far right-wing militias" whose adherents are "profoundly alienated and paranoid," and who see the federal government as The Enemy. "They are especially upset about the fiery assault on the Branch Davidian cult in Waco, Texas, as well as the fatal shootout between federal agents and Randy Weaver in rural Idaho," we are told by an endless stream of network correspondents. Indeed, the Oklahoma bombing is widely believed to have been motivated by revenge for Waco, which occurred exactly two years earlier, on April 19, 1993.

Let's begin our search for the real "dark forces" by looking at some of the militia's grievances against the government, and see if they are at all justified.

The ultimate nightmare

The Randy Weaver story embodies many Americans' ultimate night-mare—namely, the federal government coming in and destroying their life for no good reason, and then walking off like nothing had happened. As retold by Human Events (May 5, 1995), here's how it went down:

"Randy Weaver was a family man and a former Green Beret who had no criminal record. Yet in 1989 ATF singled him out for a sting operation, which many believe was motivated by his unorthodox religious and political views; Weaver was a white separatist, who believed the races should live in peace but separately. After much coaxing, an informer, who Weaver believed to be a friend, persuaded Weaver to sell him two shotguns and to shorten their barrels to a length that arguably was one-quarter inch less than allowed by federal law.

"In December 1990 Weaver was indicted for manufacturing, possessing and selling illegal firearms. The trial was originally scheduled for February 19, 1991, and then changed, at ATF's request, to February 20. However, a court official erroneously sent Weaver a letter instructing him to appear in court on March 20. The U.S attorney's office, though aware that Weaver had been given a mistaken notification, asked for and received an indictment against him for failing to appear on February 20.

"From that moment, as recounted by James Bovard in his book, Lost Rights, 'a bizarre federal crusade shifted into full gear.' Federal agents launched an elaborate 18-month surveillance of the Weavers' cabin. They had psychological profiles compiled, and installed $130,000 worth of long-range spy cameras, to record all comings and goings from the family's primitive cabin.

"On August 21, 1992, six U.S. marshals dressed in camouflage and ski masks and armed with machine guns entered the Weaver property without warning and shot one of the family's dogs. Weaver's 14-year-old son, Sammy, yelled, 'You son of a bitch—you killed my dog!' and fired a shot in the direction from which the first shot had come. Sammy, who had no idea who the assailants were, bolted toward his home, at which point a federal marshal shot the 4'11" youngster in the back and killed him. Responding to Sammy's murder, Kevin Harris, a 25-year-old friend who lived with the Weavers, fatally shot a marshal.

"The marshal's death infuriated the government, which called in the commander of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Hostage Rescue Team from Washington. The FBI ordered agents to 'shoot to kill' any armed adult outside the cabin regardless of whether any agent was threatened, even though the government knew from surveillance that the Weavers routinely were armed on their isolated property.

"The day after his son's death, Randy Weaver went to the shed where his son's body lay. Just as he was lifting the latch on the shed door, an FBI sniper fired at Weaver, wounding him in the shoulder. As he made his way back to the shelter of his home, Weaver's wife Vicki stood unarmed in the doorway holding her 10-month-old baby daughter in her arms, calling for her husband to hurry. An FBI sniper shot Vicki Weaver in the face, killing her instantly.

"During the following siege, not one shot was fired at federal agents. Meanwhile, the agents used Vicki's death to taunt the survivors in the cabin. As Jerry Seper reported in the Washington Times, 'Court records show that while the woman's body lay in the cabin for eight days, the FBI used the microphones to taunt the family. "Good morning, Mrs. Weaver. We had pancakes for breakfast. What did you have?" asked the agents in at least one exchange. Weaver's daughter Sara, 16, said the baby, Elisheba, often was crying for its mother's milk when the FBI's messages were heard."

"At the subsequent trial the government sought to prove that Weaver had conspired for nine years to have an armed confrontation with government agents. But though Weaver's attorney did not call a single defense witness, contradictions as well as evidence that the government had fabricated parts of the evidence in its case persuaded a jury to find both Weaver and Harris not guilty of killing the marshal—effectively deciding that the shooting was in self-defense.

"Though Weaver was convicted for failing to meet his court date and violating his release pending trial, the judge gave him a minimal sentence, saying, 'You've suffered far beyond what the court could do. I think you're a good person.' "I

Rogue law enforcement

This type of tragedy rips violently at the psyche of every American who grew up, as this writer did, reading stories about the FBI, Thomas Edison, George Washington, and other time-honored American heroes. It is violating to the American soul just to think about what happened at Ruby Ridge. And this incident is not unique. Here are a few other examples, provided by the National Rifle Association:

Donald Carlson: On August 25, 1992 at about 12 midnight, a group of Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agents burst into Don Carlson's house. Thinking they were robbers, Carlson grabbed his pistol to defend himself and dialed 911 for help. The agents shot Carlson three times, twice after he was down and clearly disabled. Carlson spent seven weeks in intensive care, fighting for his life. No drugs were found on the premises. It was later learned that the Federal Customs Service, the DEA, and the US Attorney's Office in San Diego had relied on an informant who was known to be untrustworthy.

Sina Brush: Just after dawn on September 5, 1991, 60 agents from the DEA, US Forest Service, BATF, and National Guard, complete with painted faces and camouflage, and accompanied by another 20 or more National Guard troops with a light armored vehicle, raided the homes of Sina Brush and two of her neighbors near Montainair, New Mexico. Brush and her daughter were still asleep. Hearing noises outside, Ms. Brush got up and was only halfway across the room when the agents kicked in the door. Clad only in their underwear, Ms. Brush and her daughter were handcuffed and forced to kneel in the middle of the room while the agents searched the house. No drugs were found. Just as in the Carlson case, the police had obtained a warrant using information furnished by an unreliable informant and had entered Brush's home without knocking first.

Waco: This most notorious case has stunned the sensibilities of millions of Americans. According to the Wall Street Journal, "...the BATF showed up at the Davidian compound with two cattle trucks full of agents in battle gear and a plan for 'dynamic entry'." The siege that followed the initial assault included terrifying psychological warfare tactics and ended when a second attack, utilizing tanks and outlawed CS gas, led to conflagration and the fiery deaths of more than 80 members of the sect, including many children.

Janice Hart: In February 1993 Janice Hart pulled up to her Portland, Oregon home after grocery shopping with her daughters to find her house being ransacked by ATF agents who had kicked in the door. Agents searched her home, throwing dishes, pulling clothing from hangers and emptying drawers on the floor (she photographed the damage). Eight ATF agents interrogated her in her basement for an hour before reading her her rights. She asked to call an attorney and the agents refused. When they finally asked her if she was Janice Marie Harrell, she told them no, that she was Janice Hart. ATF agents mocked her, accused her of selling firearms and cocaine, then arrested her. The Portland Police, who she commended for their professional demeanor, took her downtown for booking and, within 30 seconds of fingerprinting and, within 30 seconds of fingerprinting her, realized ATF had the wrong person.

DREAMLAND REPORT

In depth explorations of subjects and guests featured on Art Bell's weekly radio program "Dreamland"

GORDON-MICHAEL SCALLION UPDATE

In February, famed futurist Gordon-Michael Scallion predicted an unprecedented series of natural disasters—earthquakes, volcanoes and floods—for the U.S. in 1995. On May 5, Scallion returned to the Art Bell show to add some new predictions to those previously announced. 'Among them:

Nuclear disaster

I have been forecasting another tragedy—a nuclear disaster in this country—within the next couple of years. It will be somewhere east of the Rockies. Plants across the country will begin to shut down like dominoes. But there will be an amazing breakthrough in technology...[that will provide] a way to take our nuclear stockpile and neutralize it. So the nuclear waste gets cleaned up very quickly, as a result of these plants they will build to accomplish that.

Water problems

Much of our water will become tainted by chemicals, and particularly by salt water leaching into fresh water systems. Fresh drinking water will be a major problem. In fact, water will be the number one prime problem, and will cost the price of gold eventually.

Diseases

Our whole system is breaking down, including our immune systems. Many of the diseases we have now are what I call diseases of consciousness. We're finding that we have so altered our food sources, that when I look at the vibrational colors of foods I can clearly see the difference between an organically grown tomato and one off the shelf. There's very little life force in it. It's amazing that we are even able to sustain ourselves.

I see changes—in the magnetic forces of the earth itself, changes from all the chemicals we have pumped into the air, from the pollution, from the heavy positive ionization of the atmosphere—I see all of that as having broken our systems down. And it's going to continue—the diseases and plagues will continue. In 1991 I forecast there would be seven plagues that occur in the '90s. The positive side of this is that, by the year 2002,

I believe that before this year is out, we will see broadcasts and we will have knowledge of the existence of other life, and it will no longer be a question.

The only question will be whether it has been fabricated by government agencies.

most of the diseases that we have are gone. AIDS is totally gone, in a snap, as a result of the change of the magnetic field of the earth, its frequency and its density, and it simply eradicates most of the diseases.

Extraterrestrials

I believe that before this year is out, we will see broadcasts and we will have knowledge of the existence of other life, and it will no longer be a question. The only question will be whether it has been fabricated by government agencies.

(Editor's note: The most celebrated UFO sighting in history was in July, 1947 in Roswell, New Mexico, when the U.S. military described a downed alien craft to the Roswell newspaper as a "flying disc." After collecting the remains of the craft, the government recanted the next day and insisted the disc was only a weather balloon. According to "UFO-FAX World Report," Fox Network has paid $150,000 for 15 minutes of 16mm film allegedly shot at Roswell in 1947, depicting "Army-Air Force pathologists deep into autopsy of UFO alien crash victim." The footage is reportedly slated to be broadcast later this year on Fox. Could this be the "broadcast" that Gordon-Michael Scallion predicts for this year that will finally convince everyone of "the existence of other life"?)

Prediction network

We have created a massive data base network system. Anyone, anywhere in the world, using a simple telephone will be able to register their vision. Even at 3:00 in the morning, they can call in their vision. This data base is then updated on an hourly basis and tabulated. Anytime we get a consensus that something is going to happen, we post it on this phone network as an early warning system. This will include well-known futurists as well as novices; the more people who participate, the more data we're going to get.

RICHARD HOAGLAND UPDATE

Art Bell's listeners and readers are very familiar with Richard Hoagland, former Science Adviser to NASA and Walter Cronkite, Winner of the 1993 International Angstrom Medal for Excellence in Science, and principal investigator of an independent investigation of the Moon and Mars. As we reported in our premiere edition of After Dark (January, 1995), Hoagland and others now believe NASA photographs from the various moon missions—manned and unmanned—reveal clear evidence of astonishing, artificially-created structures on the Moon's surface.

Aided by extensive state-of-the-art computer enhancement technology, Hoagland's investigative team ("The Mars Mission") has rigorously analyzed thousands of NASA photos, some of them 30 years old. Hoagland hypothesizes the presence on the Moon of, among other things: large glass or crystalline structures extending literally miles above the Moon ("...spires of intensely scattering crystalline material like glass, 7, 8, 9 10 miles above the Moon," says Hoagland). He further postulates the existence of "several city complexes constructed under a huge glass dome," albeit in poor condition today due to eons of meteoric bombardment.

Hoagland has attracted enough attention from like-minded scientists and the media that he talks of organizing a privately-funded, unmanned robotic mission to the moon for the purpose of performing a close-up photographic survey of the planet, to confirm or disprove his contentions that the Moon has been host to ancient civilization.

Ironically, NASA, after many Moon missions during the '60s and '70s, apparently has all but ignored the Moon for many years. But then, in the Spring of 1994, for the first time in over 20 years, an unmanned U.S. military mission called Clementine successfully began returning new data from the Moon. For the next two months, ending in May, 1994, almost two million images and other information were transmitted back to Earth.

But the Pentagon, contradicting its own pre-mission directive to "prepare data for immediate release" and to "put NASA to shame," has, according to Hoagland, "inexplicably withheld" almost all of the information accumulated during Clementine from outside scientific scrutiny—as well as from members of the press and public. Nevertheless, as fate would have it, some juicy Clementine data has found its way into Richard Hoagland's hands—by means of the Internet.

It seems that last January 20, Mars Mission associate Stephen Bowen discovered on a University of Arizona Clementine "Internet" file server a color NIR (near-infrared) lunar mosaic—apparently composited from about 500 individual Clementine frames—covering approximately 300,000 square miles of the Moon, centered almost directly on the Earthside hemisphere. After downloading the Clementine file (called APP172.JPG) the Mars Mission associate checked the Internet site again, three days later, and discovered to his surprise that the entire "/incoming/clem" sub-directory had been deleted. None of the other sub-directories within "/incoming" had been touched, but without warning all of "/clem" had simply disappeared, including APP172.JPG.

In 1994, the Pentagon sent an unmanned mission, code-named Clementine, to photograph the Moon. Who would ever believe it would return brilliantly colorful close-ups of another "pentagon"—on that same Moon?

But it was too late; Hoagland's team went to work. As he tells it: "[Our] analysis of this one key multispectral mosaic...has now revealed diverse and highly redundant lunar geometry, indicative of intelligent design. This analysis-which has demonstrated myriad straight lines, hexagonal networks, equilateral triangles and other ordered structure supportive of a 'glass, geodesic "Fuller dome" model' for the region of the Moon covered by this NIR mosaic...is but the latest important development in a two-year, independent, continuing investigation into the possibility of ancient lunar artifacts, discovered on previous U.S. and Soviet data of the Moon."

In striking contrast to official pre-mission expectations, adds Hoagland, his organization's analysis of this image "reveals lunar metals and materials arranged in an astonishing geometric pattern." The presence in this image of striking (and completely inexplicable—to all "natural" lunar models) "hexagonal," "triangular," and other sharp-edged, repeating, geometric features, says Hoagland, "leads to the increasingly inescapable conclusion that these geometrically-arranged materials represent the structural remains of ancient artificial lunar habitats—long abandoned on the Moon."

Most remarkably, says Hoagland, "the patterns seem to exhibit distinct, unmistakable evidence of highly ordered layering of structures: colors representing one translucent geometry are traceable running for tens of miles beneath other equally intricate geometry. And the interwoven geometric patterns in some places, while maintaining their original, separate color values, suddenly, inexplicably, become much darker—a situation consistent with differing elevations of portions of the structures, with some sections 'seeing' radically diminished sunlight."

From even this brief description of the astonishing diversity and geometry recorded on APP172.JPG, says Hoagland, it should be abundantly apparent at this point that "something is radically 'wrong' with our current model of the Moon—certainly with all previous astronomical interpretations of the 300,000 square miles of lunar surface captured on this Clementine mosaic...centered on the hemisphere forever facing Earth!"

Indeed, says Hoagland, "far more difficult than explaining the presence of artificial structures on the lunar surface, is explaining continuing U.S. government denials-for over 30 years-of this astonishing, inexorably accumulating, publicly acquired evidence." The evidence extends back to the very first unmanned lunar missions in the early '60s, says Hoagland, and culminates now with a "secret" unmanned military lunar mission, which provides overwhelming "evidence of the 'real' Moon." And, adds Hoagland, except for "an anonymous 'leak' of this latest Clementine NIR mosaic on the Internet, the American people would still never know [this evidence] existed."

The image on the left is a satellite close-up of downtown Arlington, Virginia at about 10 meter resolution, filled with ordered, regular, geometric objects—the buildings and the streets of Arlington. The image on the right is a close-up from the "leaked" Clementine mosaic showing part of the Treisnecker "equilateral triangle/cube" at upper right, enmeshed in a spectacular "rectilinear" gridwork composed of highly regular, cross-hatched, red-blue geometric elements. The image resolution is several hundred meters. The multi-layering of these highly ordered geometric elements, their apparent transparency, and their advanced deterioration (age?) are also evident.

Right hand page: In 1994, the Pentagon sent an unmanned mission, code-named Clementine, to photograph the Moon. Who would ever believe it would return brilliantly colorful close-ups of another "pentagon"—on that same Moon? At bottom center is the world's most famous five-sided structure—the Pentagon. Figure A2: Close-up of the Pentagon, from the same image. Note diverse, multi-colored geometric structures...including a very prominent, multi-colored, pentagonal-shaped object in the right center of this image. Figure B2: Close-up, enhanced view of this remarkable "lunar pentagon," measuring over 30 miles across. As with the other structures imaged in this Clementine NIR mosaic, this object appears to be composed of myriad regular, color-coded transparent, geometric sub-structures. The nature and purpose of this object—as with all the other geometries seen here—is still unknown. home to seize his firearms collection, they grabbed his pregnant wife, Kim, and shoved her into a wall. Within days, she suffered a miscarriage. A federal judge threw the government's case out of court and ordered BATF to immediately return Mr. Katona's guns or face jail themselves. The Katonas are presently pressing civil charges against BATF.

There are many more examples, all involving forceful, abusive and often vicious assaults on innocent people's homes and businesses by BATF agents who turned out not to have a case. They involved cancer medicines thrown all over the floor, family pets stomped to death, terrified children separated from their parents, tires slashed, and much more.

As if all this were not enough, the BATF also has, in the words of the Wall Street Journal, "a woeful record of sex and racial discrimination." Indeed, CBS's "60 Minutes" in 1993 showed a room full of current female ATF agents who described a sickening pattern of sexual harassment, intimidation and retaliation in their own ranks. One female agent reported, "I was held against the hood of my car and my clothes ripped off by two agents." In March, a group of black ATF agents sued the 4,200-employee agency, charging widespread racial discrimination. Among the cited examples of alleged discrimination: White agents in Oklahoma City plastered their walls with a Confederate flag, a "State of Oklahoma Nigger Hunting License," and a Ku Klux Klan business card.

U.S. Representative Harold Volkmer has called BATF "one of the most Rambo-rogue law enforcement agencies in the United States." Democratic Representative John Dingell has called the BATF's agents "jack-booted American fascists." Indeed, as far back as 1982 the Senate Judiciary Committee concluded that the Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms was a rogue agency that had little if any regard for the 2nd, 4th, and 5th Amendments.

All one had to do was listen to talk radio after the Oklahoma bombing to hear the tremendous number of callers suggesting that the federal government itself had blown up the building.

Without a doubt, Waco, Weaver, and other such federal law enforcement night-mares have served to galvanize the modern militia movement in America. So now let's switch gears and look at the militia.

The real citizen militia

First of all, let's deal with the hopelessly disingenuous arguments of the liberal media and politicians who claim the militia concept itself—armed and organized private citizens—is somehow un-American. Originally, the Militia Act of 1792, passed just six months after the Second Amendment, established the Militia in two parts. There was an "organized militia" and an "enrolled militia." The "organized militia" was a formal body with an organizational structure, officers, and training. The "enrolled militia" was a listing of able-bodied men aged 18 to 44. American men were, very simply, meant to be citizen-soldiers.

Such a militia, wrote U.S. Supreme Court Justice Joseph Story in 1833 is "...the natural defense of a free country against sudden foreign invasions, domestic insurrections, and domestic usurpation of power by rulers..." He said further, "...the right of the citizens to keep and bear arms has justly been considered as the palladium of the liberties of a republic: since it offers a strong moral check against the usurpation and arbitrary power of rulers; and will generally, even if these are successful in the first instance, enable the people to resist and triumph over them."2 Indeed, only two decades earlier, Americans had successfully resisted an invading army—the British.

Taking the militia concept even farther, the Supreme Court, in its decision Presser v. Illinois (1886), stated: "It is undoubtedly true that all citizens capable of bearing arms constitute the reserved military force or reserve militia of the United States as well as of the States... The States cannot, even laying the Constitutional provision in question out of view, prohibit the people from keeping and bearing arms, so as to deprive the United States of their rightful resource for maintaining the public security, and disable the people from performing their duty to the general government."

An immediate threat

Today's militia movement is driven primarily by an intense fear of confiscatory taxation, destruction of property rights, unreasonable environmental regulations, government-funded indoctrination in pro-homosexual and anti-traditional dogmas, and policies that move America toward world government. Most importantly, militia members fear the government intends to abrogate their Constitutional right to keep and bear arms.

If you think that sounds radical, consider this: The militia members are apparently not alone in these fears. A recent CNN-Gallup poll found that 39% of the public believe "the federal government has become so large and powerful it poses an immediate threat to the rights and freedoms of ordinary citizens." Those administering the survey were so surprised by the large number who agreed with this strongly-worded statement that they repeated the question to make sure it was not being misunderstood. It wasn't. This fear of government, shared by tens of millions of normal, hard-working, taxpaying American citizens, is what animates today's citizen militias.

The establishment media, still running contemptuous hit-pieces on various militia groups, appear to be all but oblivious to the validity of the grievances that millions of Americans share with militia members, preferring to blame today's citizen paramilitary phenomenon entirely on the angry belchings of hateful talk radio hosts. Until the press can bring itself to spotlight the true causes of this country's terrible decline, it will be very difficult for the real "dark forces" that led to the Oklahoma tragedy to be uprooted.

Attacking the wrong target

If the federal government is indeed the incubator of the "dark forces" alluded to by the President, it is equally apparent that an ever-increasing number of Americans, especially on the fringes, outraged and frightened by government abuses and present trends, are intent on trying to take back control of their lives—one way or another. But where is all this leading?

Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols both intensely hated the federal government, so much so that Nichols renounced his American citizenship, gave up his driver's license, and repeatedly wrote government officials claiming they "have no authority" over him.

he problem with people who build up such a huge hatred of government, aside from the obvious potential for violence, is that it is totally dishonest. If such people had even a little bit of humility they would realize that they themselves are part of the problem they hate. They have contributed to the kind of government and popular culture we have, which after all are elected and supported by the people.

Citizens who exercise an ounce of honest introspection know that they have problems, and that they are not so very unlike the people within the government—the millions of rank-and-file employees, like the ones who were working at the Federal Building in Oklahoma City the day it was blown up.

Losers like McVeigh can't really look within themselves. So they have to project all evil outward—in his case onto the government as the incarnation of evil. This is the same motivation that impels racists and antisemites. They cannot bring themselves to face the failure and corruption within themselves, so they project their personal evil outwards into something safe: another race or religion. That is why many Aryan Nations-types will always blame all the world's problems on blacks and Jews. It enables them to successfully project all evil, including their own, onto something outside of themselves. They are in no danger of becoming a Jew or a black person, so therefore they can safely condemn all blacks and Jews. If they were really to condemn evil itself, they would be in danger of spotlighting some evil within themselves, and then have to deal with it. But they don't want to do that, because they're losers.

The government did it?

How widespread is the intense demonization of the federal government? All one had to do was to listen to talk radio after the Oklahoma bombing to hear the tremendous number of callers suggesting that the federal government itself had blown up the building. The bottom line is: If we blame all of our problems on the government and the BATF and the international bankers. this country's problems will never be solved. We will simply move inexorably toward the most horrifying civil war imaginable. Without honest introspection, there are no answers—to anything. The truth is, most of the people who work for the IRS and other federal agencies are decent people. They may be blind in certain areas as to what they are involved with, but they are not much different from you and me. When we can accept that, we can start to be truly effective in solving our country's problems.

The militia groups have every right to exist—historically, constitutionally, and logically. How effective they will be in truly helping America as the Founding Fathers intended in the Militia Act of

HOW WE SURVIVED ART'S VACATION

By Alan Corbeth, President, CBC

s you may recall, in the last chapter of my saga of the van-Lishing satellite we left you with a cliff hanger. I suppose I could take up where we left off, like they used to do in those old serials. The flaming arrow would hit the hero squarely in the heart one week, but when you returned the next week the arrow had only grazed the hero lightly as he lunged at a vicious villain with a death blow. Or a speeding car would careen off the side of a cliff and drop into a huge fireball incinerating our hero. Sure enough, the following week we find that our hero, in a death-defying leap and with only a split second to spare, ditched the vehicle and rolled to safety in a cloud of dust.

So where did we leave off in this riveting saga involving space travel, fiery crashes, sex, politics, and huge sums of money? While our hero Art was relaxing on vacation with his lovely wife and fans, a massive telecommunications satellite was just about ready to come crashing down to Earth. Moreover, with one of our analog satellites ready to crash and burn, the other one was pre-empting half of Art's Show.

To make matters worse, the one ready to crash and burn was carrying scrambled porno films on the video portion of the signal. Every so often and without warning, it would unscramble, causing attacks of hypertension and anxiety across the nation. Some say Art picked up thousands of new listeners as a result. When "Art Bell, The Movie" comes out, this is where the producers can insert the gratuitous sex scenes.

In any event, as most people would agree, we had a huge problem and one that was not resolved at the time of my last writing. I am happy to tell you that, at least for the time being, our analog satellite service problems seem to be over. At the beginning of May we accepted new service on Satellite C-1 (also known as F-1 on some home dish systems). Satcom C-1 is one of the backbone satellites for the transmission of commercial radio sub carrier audio. The CBC/TRN signal is located on Channel 5, 5.8 audio wideband. To date, the signal has been strong, clear, easy to find, and most important, reliable. We have a three-year contract on this satellite, so hopefully we won't have to worry about that particular service for the time being.

At the time of this writing, Art and an entourage of loyal listeners are making the ultimate sacrifice by suffering through the crowds of Hong Kong and Bangkok. It's a tough job going to all those great restaurants and shopping in what to Art must be the nearest thing to paradise, the electronics areas. It will be fun and interesting to hear Art's impressions of China and Thailand.

All in all, if things go as expected, Art will have missed eleven "Coast To Coast" shows and two "Dreamlands." We chose six of his hottest, most requested programs to re-air, and filled the remaining five shows with live talk radio. Despite Art's absence, we didn't want to lose the flavor of the show, so we maintained his presence with the taped programs. The drawback to this approach was that because of the nature of the show, we still needed to maintain a vehicle to cover current events and breaking news. That's why we scheduled five live shows. Hopefully we achieved the proper balance.

Of course, all of us here at CBC/TRN were acutely aware that there was no way to fill Art's shoes during his absence. What he does, and the way he does it, is totally unique. Therefore, rather than attempting in any way to emulate Art, our replacement personnel had as their goal to keep the show current, informative, and entertaining. We chose two teams for the live shows.

The first was Talk Radio Network's Roger Fredinberg, affectionately known as "Radio's Regular Guy." Big Rog, whose show precedes Art's on many of our affiliates, is a very entertaining conservative with a great home-spun sense of humor. He really is, plain and simply, a regular guy. His dad owned a barber shop where, as a teenager, Roger shined shoes. He later became a chemical salesman, a microfilm technician with 3M, and a scrapyard worker who pulled metal apart.

With all that under his belt, he began doing part-time radio, which turned into full-time radio at our flagship station, KOPE, in Medford, Oregon. In addition, Roger became the radio station's local Sales Director. When his very popular local show went national, Roger began selling advertising for Talk Radio Network. He continues on in this capacity. Roger lives in the Medford, Oregon area with his wife Ann, two daughters Courtney and Sarah, and his wife's son, Ryan.

The morning crew at the flagship station—Gary, Lisa, and Bob—also covered two of Art's Shows. How this team ended up on the air together is good for volumes. Let's just say that the thing works, and we won't try to spell out why. All good talk hosts have unique attributes that make them who they are. In this case, Gary is Mr. Factman, Democrat, and political junkie. Bob is Mr. Rightwing idealist, and also a political junkie, and Lisa is the biggest wise guy and cynic I've come across in a long time.

Everyone pulled together while Art was gone and did a valiant job of holding the fort. Having said that, I sincerely hope everyone out there survived Art's absence. I'm sure you're glad he's back. I know I am.

Sounds like "the socialist from Kansas City" to me. McVeigh Goes on: "America is in serious decline. We have no proverbial tea to dump. Should we instead sink a ship full of Japanese imports? Is a civil war imminent? Do we have to shed blood to reform the current system? I hope it doesn't come to that but it might."

I guess he decided it had to "come to that," but my hope, and the hope of many, is that the Oklahoma City tragedy will not represent the start of America's fast slide into chaos. Instead, let it begin a rebirth of the American spirit of freedom and personal responsibility. Let's dump the envy. And reject those who encourage it.

It might be nice to take joy in other people's accomplishments. After all, even if we don't succeed, don't we hope our children will? What parents would want their children to be forced to register with the Department of Fair Wages and Reasonable Profits—in case they succeed too much?

"At about 100-meter resolution, everything changes. The planet is revealed to be covered with straight lines, squares, rectangles, and circles... Their regularity, complexity, and distribution would be hard to explain except by life and intelligence..."

-Carl Sagan

"This striking description by Carl Sagan," says Richard Hoagland, "formerly restricted to one planet in the entire solar system—Earth—can now, following Clementine, for the first time be equally applied to Earth's extraordinary Moon."

CBC/TRN AFFILIATE UPDATE

By Julian Hudson, Director, Affiliate Relations

As we go to print, we have grown to 115 affiliates taking or committed to taking "Dreamland," 166 affiliates taking or committed to taking "Coast to Coast," and, for CBC as a whole, 178 stations total, 12 of which carry "Dreamland" only. As a network, therefore, CBC needs only another 22 stations to reach the 200 mark carrying at least one of Art's programs! If your local CBC affiliate is carrying only "Dreamland," please drop them a line and ask them to take "Coast to Coast." Many of Art's "Dreamland" guests appear on his nightly program and any help you give us in this direction is appreciated.

Finally, here's a list of new stations taking Art's programs, including our first Canadian affiliate: CIFX in Manitoba. If you have a moment and one of these stations is in your area, by all means please call and thank them for great programming:

1792, as opposed to merely being a let's-get-mad-at-the-government club frequented by self-righteous, paranoid, weekend warriors, will be to the exact degree that they understand that all of us have contributed in some way to the metastasizing of evil in this world. We are all responsible for this mess we're in, and we all have to work together to fix it.

It is right to be prepared for "Plan Z"—that is, armed defense against a tyrannical government, as the founding fathers explicitly recommended. But without the character and discipline required for plans A through Y, meaning every level of involvement in the political process, from voting, to running for office, to campaigning and organizing—without the patience and commitment to be able to deal effectively within the system, we will only be prepared for "Plan Z." And then we won't have the character to pull that off either, if one day, God forbid, the final option is the only one left.

Shortly after the Oklahoma City bombing, a federal investigator who monitors militia activity said "he hoped to the bitter end that the Oklahoma attack hadn't been the 'patriots." If it was, he said, it could mean the big crackdown the movement has been predicting all along—and then, he said, "all hell will break loose."

If the government is foolish enough to try to squash the militia movement, there will undoubtedly be much bloodshed, as some militia members will behave like animals trapped in a corner

"The right of the people to keep and bear..arms shall not be infringed. A well-regulated militia, composed of the body of the people, trained to arms, is the best and most natural defense of a free country..."

with nowhere left to go; they will fight even when they know they have no chance of winning. There are undoubtedly some on both sides that would like to see that happen. Let us hope that cooler heads prevail, both within the federal law enforcement organizations and in the militias themselves. Ultimately, the militia's worst enemies are the radicals, hate-mongers, and wannabee bombers in their own midst. And conversely the BATF and other law enforcement agencies have to look carefully within for their own brand of subversives.

Final thoughts

In what many call the coming battle between good and evil, a good person in Nebraska works hand in hand with a good person in Timbuktu to bring about a beautiful future. Even though they may never meet each other, they are on the same team. In the same way, bad guys across the country and around the world—an angry bully employed by ATF and an angry loser like Timothy McVeigh, for instance, are on the same team. Both are working together to bring about a chaotic, violent and miserable future. So choose your team carefully.
