To go with our improved disk code, users will have to reformat their drives. I have asked the people from DCM to write this conversion program to allow us time to complete other improvements.

The otherwise simple task of modifying the format utility is logically made more complicated by the software interleaving and possibly the bad track areas. Should we hold onto the software interleave or make the change to a linear map now? Does this impact data security during the transfer?

Any inputs or suggestions appreciated. Anil said today that someone would be available to start monday. 9/17.
