February 1988

Dear Fellow PC*jr* Owner,

Peanut Gallery is a national organization dedicated to the sales and support of IBM-PCjr and peripherals. Since 1983, we have helped thousands of Junior owners maximize the potential of their "orphaned" computer.

Among the many services we provide are expert technical support, depot repair, and upgrades for PC*jr* memory boards. We also stock new expansion products including disk drives, memory boards, and hundreds of jr-compatible hardware, software and accessory items.

This "mini-catalog" is just a sampling of our complete product line. Included here are jr-expansion products, input devices and Public Domain / Shareware diskettes (beautifully written and amazingly powerful software available to you for just the cost of the diskettes plus handling).

Once you place an order with Peanut Gallery, you will be entered into our ever-growing customer database of PC*jr* owners and receive all future mailings on new products, sales, and special offers for Junior from Peanut Gallery.

Thank you for your time and consideration. We look forward to providing you with quality products, service, and support to help you make the most of your IBM-PC*jr*.

Very truly yours,

Brian Mintz

IT'S NICE TO SHARE!

Shareware Software is marketed by the unorthodox method of distributing a useful program for just the cost of the media plus handling. Users who try these programs and find them of value are expected to register their disk with the author, and pay a license fee, usually $10 to $45. Shareware is generally written by individuals and companies who do not have the financial means to compete with multi-million dollar software companies. Frequently, Shareware is comparable, if not superior to low-end "for sale" software products. Documentation is generally included as a text file on the distribution diskette(s), and can be read on screen or printed off on your system.

Public Domain Software differs from Shareware in that financial remuneration is not expected in return for use of the software. These authors make their programs available out of the "goodness of their hearts!"
